

Dear Texas museums,

My name is Glenn Abdelnoor, and I work for the Texas Department of Insurance, offering consultations and promoting our free resources to the museums and cultural heritage sites in Texas. We are a government funded small business assistance program, and our mission is to assist employers with safety and health issues in the workplace.

Our services are free for small to medium-sized private museums and organizations and include on-site hazard surveys and assistance in developing written safety and health programs. We also have a variety of free safety and health resources available to anyone, including: a training video library, safety publications, examples of written Workplace Safety Programs, as well as a recently developed publication specifically focused on workplace safety and health in museums and cultural heritage.

OSHCON: Occupational Safety and Health Consultation Program offers a wide range of safety and health tools and resources. Some that may be particularly useful are:

- Free onsite consultation services for small to mid-sized private-sector employers
- Museum and Cultural Heritage Industry Workplace Safety Program Guide
- Free Safety and Health Publications: Includes both short and detailed publications on how to develop and implement safety and health training programs.
- Workplace Health and Safety Videos
- Free or low-cost OSHA 10-hour Construction Safety Classes and General Industry Classes
- Templates for OSHA-Required Written Programs
