- migration: moving from one place to another

Historical Context
Before Texas became a state in 1845, settled lands in Texas were limited to the coast, east Texas, and land grant settlements in central and south Texas. All of the western lands were dominated by Native American peoples, most notably Lipan Apaches and Comanches.

By the late 1840s, white settlers were pushing the line of settlement further west. Americans began moving west from the settled eastern states, across the prairie territories, and toward the western territories such as California and Colorado. In 1848, this migration was further fueled by the California Gold Rush. Thousands of settlers took to the Oregon and Santa Fe Trails to cross the continent. Two roads from San Antonio to El Paso, the Upper and Lower Emigrant Roads, took settlers through west Texas.

In early 1852, the U.S. Army established Fort McKavett, west of Fort Mason and approximately 181 miles from San Antonio on the Upper Road. Soldiers stationed at the fort were responsible for providing safe escort to travelers, mail carriers, and wagon trains heading west into frontier territory.

In the 1800s, immigrants from the United States, Mexico, and Europe poured into frontier territory, threatening tribal hunting grounds and buffalo herds. Native groups raided livestock and settlements to slow the loss of their land. In the 1850s, in response to the tribal attacks and in order to increase safety for travelers heading west, the U.S. military established forts like Fort McKavett throughout west Texas. Native American tribes remaining in Texas, such as the Comanche and Lipan Apaches, lost as many as half of their population due to hunting lands being blocked by forts and settlements, professional hunters and settlers decreasing the buffalo herds, and deaths caused by diseases brought by European settlers.

After battling starvation and disease for years and losing most of their supplies and horses in battles with the U.S. Army, Native American resistance on the frontier came to an end as a result of the Red River War of 1874-1875. Remaining native groups were forced to move to reservations near Fort Sill in present-day Oklahoma.
Although combat was a small part of the frontier soldier’s life, Fort McKavett troops participated in several major Indian campaigns including Mackenzie’s and Shafter’s raids into Mexico, and the Battle of Palo Duro Canyon during the Red River War.

Activity: Views of the Texas Frontier
20 minutes

Display or distribute the 1850 map of Texas. Point out the settled lands in the east and the open prairies of the west including the “Apaches Farones” and the “Range of the Comanches” territories.

Display or distribute the Texas frontier quotes resource. Give students time to skim the text to identify and define any unknown words. As a class, identify the speakers and each speaker’s intended audience. Ask students to analyze why the speakers’ life experiences influenced their views of the frontier.

Activity: Frontier Settlement and Its Impact on Native Peoples
25 minutes

Distribute or display the image of Comanches on the reservation at Fort Sill. Have students complete the National Archive photo analysis worksheet. Point out the Library of Congress citation that gives information about the photo. Discuss responses.

As an extension, have students write a personal narrative reaction to the photo or a fictional narrative from the photo subjects’ point of view.

Context: The Civil War had a dramatic impact on the fort system. Control of the forts changed hands and basic maintenance of the fort buildings ceased. Four companies from the 35th Infantry joined the 4th Cavalry at Fort McKavett in 1868, re-establishing federal control of the fort. U.S. troops stationed there would focus on rebuilding the fort for the next 10 years.
In this activity, students will work in small groups using two primary source documents and a reference historical timeline to answer questions about the route from San Antonio to Fort McKavett, as traveled by the 35th U.S. Army Infantry.

Divide students into small groups. Display or distribute Letter from U.S. Army Headquarters 1870 and the transcription, Route Marched Map and Enlargement, and Frontier Forts Timeline.

Have students work together to find and record the following information:

- Name the four major stops on the route between San Antonio and Fort McKavett.
  [Boerne, Fredericksburg, Cold Sp’ s, Fort Mason]

- Who was in command of the troops marching this route?
  [Captain J. H. Hopkins]

- What was the purpose of the letter written by the U.S. Army headquarters in 1870?
  [To inform the governor of Texas that U.S. military forces, not state authorities, are responsible for preserving peace on the frontier.]

- Fort McKavett was built near which river?
  [San Saba River]

- Look closely at the magnified section of the map. List at least two details that are noted along the route.
  [condition of the road, availability of resources such as water, wood]

- Why would additional information noted on a map be a helpful addition to a traveler?
  [Details about landmarks, available resources, difficult/easy passage areas etc. would better prepare a traveler to this area.]

- What is the distance in miles between San Antonio and Fort McKavett?
  [181 miles]

- You have just completed an activity using primary sources. What challenges did you have in using, understanding, or interpreting this kind of resource?
  [Answers will vary.]
Assessment
Evaluate student participation and printouts for completeness and understanding.

Take-Home Extension
Tell students to create a KWL Chart to take home. Have them complete the “What I Know” and “What I Want to Know” columns about Fort McKavett. After completing all pre-visit preparations and the on-site field trip, have students complete the “What I Learned” column for learning assessment.

Activity Quotes: Views of the Texas Frontier

These outposts are connected by a road, now in considerable use, which passes by Forts McKavett, Chadbourne, and Phantom Hill. A line of settlements will soon follow, and the Indians will then be confined to the great desert planes, which can furnish them with little game and, probably, no cultivated food. Starvation will compel submission or emigration, and this great district will become open to peaceable occupation.

Frederick Law Olmsted 1857

A long time ago this land belonged to our fathers; but when I go up to the river I see camps of soldiers here on its bank. These soldiers cut down my timber; they kill my buffalo; and when I see that, my heart feels like bursting; I feel sorry.

Santana, Chief of the Kiowas 1867
